A HARVEST OF WILSON'S SOWING

Wilson's two years of "watchful ture of submarines. waiting" in Mexico have brought just what such a policy could be expected to bring. VALUE OF OLD FRIENDS.

follow in 1917.

As to old friends, they are like old shoes, an abiding comfort and a great solace. If they have not been tried in extremity they have been tested by time and its mutations, and by the wear of years. There is little more beautiful in human experience than long-sustained friendships between women grown far into the years, for example, and yet who have maintained their communion of dreams and confidences unbroken and unspoiled. There is little more refreshing to contemplate than friendships between middle-aged or old men that have existed in strength and harmony from boyhood days. Other friendships have these folks of the passing generation, some of them true, some of them tried, but none of them as richly regarded and highly treasured as the old ones. For necessarily there are many things that occur in a lifetime which par or disturb us, which give a different turn to our tastes and disposition, which introduce changing elements and predilections into the problems of the day-and times of the present and future can never be the same as in the long ago. Yet the old friends remain, possibly not in the same neighborhood or comunity, nor in the same part of the country. But they are ever within the boundaries of our spiritual vision and they are enshrined in the sanctuary of the heart. Without them we should be lonesome in a crowd, and sometimes should feel as if we had been abandoned, though surrounded by our own household and loved ones. Old friends, in brief, have a niche all their own,

Aaron Burr's Grave.

Aaron Burr died at Port Richmond, Staten Island, Sept. 14, 1836. His remains were conveyed to Princeton. N. J., where, according to his request, he was interred at the feet of his father and grandfather. Both his father and grandfather were presidents of Princeton college

For nearly two years the spot where he lay was unmarked, when one morning it was discovered that a small. very substantial and not inexpensive monument of granite and marble had been placed during the night over his remains. No one in the town saw the monument erected or knew anything whatever respecting it. There was no stonecutter in the vicinity capable of executing the work. The stone bears the inscription: "Anron Burr Born Feb. 6, 1756. Died Sept. 14, 1836

FOODS THE TURKS EAT.

Pilaff Is the National Dish, and but Littie Meat is Used.

Vegetables, fruits and grains are the staples of the Turkish kitchen. Breakfast on the Bosporus consists of a small cup of Turkish coffee and a roll. At noon there is a bowl of sour milk (yaourt) and bread. Thick Turkish coffee is taken again in the afternoon to key up appetites for the principal meal, which comes at night. This meal includes, probably, pilaff (meat SUPREME COURT JOB and rice), several kinds of vegetables, pastry and thick coffee. The workman's meal is still more simple a chunk of bread and an onion or a bunch of grapes.

There are, however, some dishes upon the Turkish bill of fare which the returned westerner never ceases to regret. Pilaff is one. It is a food as national with the Turk as the potato with the Irish, as the cabbage with the German. It takes a multitude of forms, but its basic quality, its quality of being pilaff, is derived from rice being cooked in such a way as to preserve each grain firm and distinct. The rice is unpolished and in cooking takes on a gelatinous coat. Sometimes it is boiled in mutton fat, a rich, smooth, inviting dish. Sometimes bits of roast mutton are mingled with it, when it becomes a meat pudding of delicious flavor. It is cooked with small currants and pine nuts, fragrant and spicy, It is stuffed with dates and flavored with orange peel; but, whatever its form, it is one of the treasured memories of a visit to the near east.

Eggplant is the foundation of another favored Turkish dish. It is stuffed with chopped onions and rice and cooked in oil. It is also stuffed with meat marrows and rice and steamed until it by the Turks. Yaourt, cultured milk as thick as sour cream, prepared from the rich milk of the nuffato cow, is a satisfaction to the most pampered diner. A Varnishing Tip. When varnishing wood the work must be done in a warm room at a temperature of at teast 75 degrees F. At a lower temperature the moisture in the air will give a milky and cloudy appearance to the varnish. On the other hand, at the higher temperature the moisture is not precipitated until the alcohol of the varnish has suffi ciently evaporated to leave a thin smooth film of shellac. The durability and gloss are dependent on this.
